Microbeads

You may have seen in the news recently controversy over the use of microbeads in exfoliant products. While microbeads allow active ingredients to penetrate the skin to deeper levels, they are non-biodegradable and are building up in waterways, lakes, and oceans, where marine life can mistakenly consume them. Particularly, the plastic beads are accumulating in Sydney Harbour, and so petitions arose to ban the use of microbeads in personal care products.

Major companies such as IGA, Johnson & Johnson, Coles, Woolworths and Aldi have all committed to phasing out microbeads from their products.

Our two skincare brands that contain exfoliating scrubs (ASAP and Ultraceuticals) have both already removed microbeads from their exfoliators. The ASAP uses honey derivatives to suspend their penetrative ingredients in the Daily Exfoliating Scrub formula, and Ultraceuticals use microspheres of jojoba extract in their Ultra Gentle Exfoliating Gel.

So you can rest assured that your use of exfoliating scrubs purchased at Raptcha'u are not contributing to the accumulation of microbeads in our waterways!

7 THINGS A FIRST TIMER NEEDS TO KNOW ABOUT WAXING

1. The hairs need to be around 3mm in length to be waxed.
2. Waxing is also an awesome way of not only removing the hairs from your legs but also exfoliating the legs for softer, smoother skin.
3. Avoid plucking and shaving in between waxes. This will minimise the changes of ingrown hairs and help to give a smoother wax.
4. Waxing doesn't promote hair growth. In fact, it reduces the hair growth, as the hairs grow back softer and more sparse.
5. Depending on your hair growth, most people get their waxing done about once a month.
6. You can have a spray tan the same day as you wax if you'd like, however it is ideal to leave it until the next day.

BONUS FACT

Do you suffer from waxing bumps? This is quite common, and is called perifollicular inflammations. It is inflammation of the follicle after the trauma of the hair being removed. It's basically swelling inside the follicle. Certain areas of the body are more prone to it than other. Guys find their chest and back seems to break out and for women facial waxing seems to be the culprit. However, the good news is that it can be minimized with the correct homecare after waxing. Washing the skin with a cleanser such as the ASAP Daily Facial Cleanser ($49) is great for keeping the area really clean. The Daily Facial Cleanser contains salicylic acid which is great for getting in and cleaning the pores out. We also find applying the ASAP Soothing Gel ($49), which contains aloe vera and white tea, is very calming and minimises the break outs. Usually waxing bumps lessen over time as your skin adjusts if you continue to wax somewhat frequently.
